Allowable Subject Matter

The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance: Prior art discloses all of the claimed limitations of a stator winding bar for an electrical machine, comprising: a plurality of strands arranged in stacks on top and next to each other; an active part extending along a winding slot of the stator laminated core, said active part being adjoined on each of both sides by an end winding, whereby said active part is divided in length into a central middle part and two border zones of equal length enclosing the central middle part, and whereby the strands of the stator winding bar are transposed in. However, Prior art does not disclose a central middle part, and whereby the strands of the stator winding bar are transposed in the active part according to the manner of a Roebel bar with each other by approximately 450 degrees, of which 270 degrees are on the middle part and 90 degrees each are on the two border zones, while the strands in the end windings extend without transposition parallel to each other, characterized in that, for the compensation of the external fields that act in the region of the end winding and induce circulating currents, the middle part of the active part has a length that is greater than $3/4$ of the total length of the active part.
